

Commentary to The Feast of All Saints

Detail from a medieval manuscript illumination depicting the Feast of All Saints. The scene shows a large group of saints, including men, women, and children, all wearing halos and holding various symbols of their lives. The figures are arranged in several rows, creating a dense and colorful composition. The background is a solid gold leaf, which makes the figures stand out. The figures are dressed in rich, colorful robes of various colors like red, blue, green, and pink. Some figures are holding books, keys, or other objects. The overall style is characteristic of the Gothic or early Renaissance period.
