

Commentary on the Gospel for Fri, Oct 14th 2011

“Are you not worth more than a flock of sparrows?” Unfortunately some people would answer negatively. They think they are good for nothing creatures who will go unnoticed when they are gone. In a world where one’s worth is measured by what he possesses people who are not given much tend to look at themselves as less fortunate. Yet the Lord is telling us that we are blessed because we are called children of God. He loves us and he will not abandon us. Our worth is not measured by anything else but by the fact that we are God’s children. Not one of the sparrows has been forgotten by God. Are we not worth more than a flock of sparrows?
