

Commentary on the Gospel for Fri, Nov 11th 2011

“In daylights, in sunsets, in midnights, in cups of coffee...How do you measure the year in the life? How about love? Measure in love!” Jonathan Larson’s Seasons of Love says it all. In the ordinariness of our life comes every opportunity to love and every opportunity to love is an opportunity to live in the presence of God. Like the people during the time of Noah and Lot, we may be preoccupied with our own daily activities of eating, drinking, buying and selling, building and planting. Yet in the ordinariness of our day to day living, Jesus is coming. At the end of the year, we’ll measure our life by the many times that we encounter Jesus in the ordinariness of our life, made special by the love that we share. Measure in love!
