

Commentary on the Gospel for Fri, Nov 25th 2011

When everything falls down and fails to offer hope and security to our life, only the genuinely reliable remains. We will be abandoned by friends and even at times family members, the society will hate us and the wealth and positions we have may be taken away from us. In those times of abandonment and neglect, we realize our nothingness and we turn to the Source of all. We remember his words still echoing in our hearts: “Be not afraid.” “Be still and know that I am God.” Jesus is telling us: “My words will not pass away.” What assurance so great can we still expect when we know that God will remain faithful to His words.
