

Commentary on the Gospel for Sat, Jun 2nd 2012

The weaker a man is the more he will insist on his authority and privileges. I heard someone say: “If you give a man a nose who never had one, he would be blowing it all day!” But Jesus was in no way intimidated by them, though they had power of life and death over him.. Shakespeare spoke of “art made tongue-tied by authority,; but Jesus was not lost for words; he defeated the official deputation in debate. Many a heroic stance by Christians was inspired by his strength, his manliness.
