

Commentary on the Gospel for Mon, Oct 1st 2012

The greatest in the world, according to the world, is the one who has power, wealth or influence. Job was considered greatest because he had great wealth. Later he lost everything. According to him, he has become like a new born baby just from mother's womb, naked and dependent. Jesus tells us that the greatest is a child. In a way Jesus tells that when Job lost everything he has become the greatest. Even when I lose everything on earth but only possess God can I still say am the greatest because I possess God?

Fr. George Vayaliparampil, cmf