

Commentary on the Gospel for Tue, Sep 4th 2012

Most of the greatest crimes committed in the 20th century were committed by people who excused themselves afterwards by saying that they were following orders. The people who order atrocities who do them do not take responsibility: each group hides behind the other. How refreshing it is when people speak or act and there are no faceless persons lurking behind their backs, and they likewise are not lurking behind the backs of others. Then the truth is made manifest. The Greek word for “truth” is aletheia, and it means “to be unveiled, to stand in the open, to be made manifest.”
