

Commentary on the Gospel for Sat, Dec 29th 2012

When I look at myself in the mirror, I sometimes ask where all the years of my life have gone. The old man I now see is actually the young boy or the cuddly baby I was once. As the days and years passed, I left behind my youth, my vigor, and eventually, this world. But my life journey though brief has been a journey made memorable by having known Jesus and being gifted with faith in him. Now, finally at the end of this journey, I will soon meet him face to face.
