

Liturgy Alive of Weekday in Ordinary Time

Opening Prayer

Lord our God,
you ask us through your Son, Jesus Christ:
which road do you want to take:
the one that is undemanding and effortless,
or the road and the gate
that are narrow and difficult and full of obstacles?
Lord, whatever road or gate it is,
let it be that of your Son,
for he is our Lord for ever.

First Reading Introduction:

Lot takes the rich, fertile plain that will be destroyed, on the other hand, Abraham takes the stony hills that his people will possess.

Gospel Reading Introduction:

Too often, we worry much more than we should and about things that, after all, don't matter much. Are not our fears and worries mostly about things and events of the future, and do they not usually prove groundless? We are in God's hands. He who cares for the birds in the sky cares for us and knows what we need. Let's be concerned, then, about making his kingdom a reality now; this is all that matters.

General Intercessions

- Lord, do not allow us to take pleasure in judging people, but like you, in pardoning them, we pray:
- Lord, let our faith be an act of trust that we are in your hands, you want our happiness and you know where you lead us, we pray:
- That the awareness of our own shortcomings may dispose us to put aside our irritation at the mistakes of others, we pray:

Prayer over the Gifts

Generous Father,
you give us your good gifts without measure,
for you are our Father.
Accept in these offerings of bread and wine
our willingness to learn from your Son to love one another without measure, to learn to understand one another and to go together the ways of peace
of Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Prayer after Communion

Lord God, our Father,
your Son came into the world
not to condemn it but to save it.
For this he gives himself to us
here in this Eucharistic Celebration.
Let us share in his attitude.
Make us look into our own hearts
and learn to see in our neighbor,
behind their faults and failures,
the face of him who came to forgive and to fill us with his life,
Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Blessing

God really cares for us. If he cares for the birds in the sky and the flowers in the field, why would he not care for us? We are in his hands. May the God who loves you bless you, the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit.
